

Wakefield Beasley & Associates appoints Jeremy Hull director of firm's new Planning Studio

ATLANTA, Ga. - Wakefield Beasley & Associates Architects Inc., the award-winning Atlanta-based architectural firm, has launched its Planning Studio to provide a full range of professional land planning services, including mixed-use, urban infill, residential and community planning.

"Many of our clients already look to WBA to guide them through the integration of architecture and the site plan, so this is a natural step in forward thinking for our company. With the addition of this new studio and the knowledge that we bring to the company, we are able to broaden our knowledge base and provide our clients with a more complete and thorough look at the project as a whole," said Jeremy Hull, director for the new studio.

Working as a master planner on a wide variety projects ranging from small urban infill sites to +4,500 acre Traditional Neighborhood Developments, Jeremy has developed a holistic approach to site planning, integrating all aspects for design from engineering to architecture.
